Rocket Lab Receives $23.9 Million Boost to Expand Space Tech Production

Our Correspondent
info@impressivetimes.com

NEW DELHI: The U.S. Commerce Department said on Tuesday it planned to award Rocket Lab $23.9 million to dramatically boost the production of compound semiconductors used in satellites and spacecraft. The award for Rocket Lab unit SolAero Technologies Corp "would help create a more robust and resilient supply of space-grade solar cells that power spacecrafts and satellites", the department said, adding it would "increase Rocket Lab's compound semiconductor production by 50% within the next three years." The funds are to come from the Biden administration's $52.7 billion chip manufacturing and research subsidy program that has benefited companies like South Korea's Samsung Electronics, Intel and Taiwan's TSMC. Separately,

THE FUNDS ARE TO COME FROM THE BIDEN ADMINISTRATION'S $52.7 BILLION CHIP MANUFACTURING AND RESEARCH SUBSIDY PROGRAM THAT HAS BENEFITED COMPANIES LIKE SOUTH KOREA'S SAMSUNG ELECTRONICS, INTEL AND TAIWAN'S TSMC.

the State of New Mexico has committed to providing financial assistance and incentives worth $25.5 million to Rocket Lab as the company works on the expansion of its facility in Albuquerque. Rocket Lab, founded in 2006 by New Zealander Peter Beck, is one of two U.S. firms specializing in the production of highly efficient, radiation resistant compound semiconductors called space-grade solar cells, the department said. Commerce Secretary Gina Raimondo said solar cells were crucial for keeping communication and space technology powered and operational, and the proposed $23.9 million award would help Rocket Lab expand production facilities to meet growing demand for chips from the U.S. military, NASA and the commercial space industry. The company's solar cells support U.S. space programs, including missile awareness systems, the James Webb Space Telescope, NASA's Artemis lunar explorations, Ingenuity Mars Helicopter, and Mars Insight Lander. Rocket Lab has won several hundreds of millions of dollars in U.S. federal contracts, including for satellite production, the launch of spacecrafts and a deal to explore delivering cargo using its rockets. The latest award, like others from the chips subsidy program, have yet to be finalized and amounts could change after the Commerce Department conducts due diligence. The proposed investment would also benefit Rocket Lab's Albuquerque facility expansion and create more than 100 manufacturing jobs, the company said in a statement. Rocket Lab also plans to claim the Department of the Treasury's investment tax credit of up to 25% of qualified capital expenditures. The investment tax credit created by the Chips Act is estimated to be worth about $24 billion.

APPLE UNLEASHES AI POWER TO BOOST IPHONE SALES

NEW DELHI: Apple's developer conference on Monday was about more than infusing its software with the latest artificial intelligence technology, including from ChatGPT. It was also about selling more iPhones. Facing choppy consumer spending and resurgent tech rivals, Apple has looked to AI as a way to invigorate its loyal fan base of more than 1 billion customers and to reverse a sales decline for its biggest-selling product. The software, which requires at least an iPhone 15 Pro or Pro Max to operate, may encourage a cascade of new purchases, several analysts said. Some predicted the biggest upgrade cycle come autumn since Apple's release of the iPhone 12 in 2020, which drew consumers in part through 5G connectivity. "What we saw today was more compelling than anything we've seen since," analyst Gil Luria of D.A. Davidson said.
